Wastelands

A vacant lot that was once a garbage dump now receives the charred bodies of women. Around them, the voices in the novel denounce the indifference of a society that normalizes violence and turns abuse into fertile ground for the impunity of femicide perpetrators.

NOVELA

Nobody's daughter

In a world ravaged by violence and social collapse, the figure of the gaucho reappears in a post-apocalyptic landscape where the old boundaries between civilization and barbarism are once again brought into question. Through terror and dystopia, the novel revisits national history and questions the fate of culture in a ruined future.

Baviano

Ignacio Bustos dies alone, but his archives reveal magic, decadence, and legends. Joan Xoares in the 17th century? Catamarca, spontaneous combustion, and suicides? Everything converges in Baviano. Leiva constructs a novel unfolding across four centuries, with the rhythm of a chacarera, uniting Cervantes, Bowie, Di Fulvio, and necromancy.

EL OFICIAL DE CORREOS

FEDERICO DEL PUP

The postal officer

The postal officer follows Fernando de Gracia, a messenger from the Colombian Caribbean who, in 1902, during the Thousand Days' War, steals an arsenal to stop an arms shipment. Years later, in 1940 and 1955, his fragmented memory confronts the past when a Spaniard reveals that his story is written in an Argentine book. A novel about memory, power, and clandestinity.

EL RECUERDO DE ELEONOR

JOSEP ANTHONI

The memory of Eleonor

The Memory of Eleanor is a lyrical monologue about the last princess of darkness, a fragile being who wavers between abandonment and the hope of eternal love. The novel explores love that persists in the shadows, inner beauty in the face of the world's fading light, and the promise of a love that dares to shine one last time.
